A cyber breach can happen unexpectedly, whether through a phishing email, ransomware, or unauthorised access to sensitive data. When a cyber breach occurs, it can disrupt your practice, impact clients, and trigger regulatory obligations. Lawcover's Cyber Risk Insurance policy is designed to support and assist law practices in these moments.

The policy sits alongside your professional indemnity insurance and is automatically available to all Lawcover insured practices, at no additional cost. It provides up to $50,000 in cover for emergency response services and practical support if your practice is breached.

The policy covers key areas of law practice exposure including:

- Crisis management, privacy requirements and client notification expenses, as well as
- Electronic business interruption and cyber extortion.

Regardless of whether your law practice already holds a cyber policy with another insurer, Lawcover's Cyber Risk policy is still available should you choose to use it. As you review your insurance requirements, it's worth considering whether your current level of cyber risk cover meets your practice's specific needs. You may wish to consider independent advice to assess the right level of cyber cover for your law practice.

If you experience a cyber breach, call the number on your screen, our cyber incident response team will guide you through the next steps. If client funds have been lost because of the breach, you should notify Lawcover as well.

With Lawcover's Cyber Risk Insurance, your practice has immediate access to expert support and assistance if a cyber incident happens. Acting quickly and knowing where to turn can make all the difference in protecting your clients, your reputation, and the smooth running of your practice.
